

Forensic financial analysis, court-ready in minutes.

LedgerSense skills for Claude, shared with your firm. Give it a bank statement and the supporting records, and it prepares a draft schedule with every figure traced back to the source transaction. The practitioner reviews and signs off.

For UK solicitors, insolvency practitioners and accountants

What it prepares

Three kinds of matter, each produced as a draft schedule and PDF for your review.

Demo matter, invented data

Director's loan account

Director's loan account reconstruction

- Day-by-day balance, opening to closing
- Drawings and repayments separated from salary and dividends
- s.455 exposure: the dates the balance passes £10,000
- Flags for review, such as bed-and-breakfasting and same-day mirrored payments

Demo matter, invented data

Solvency timeline

Solvency timeline

- Month-by-month indicators: cash, creditor days, HMRC arrears, returned items, formal demands
- A nominated point of no return, with the earliest defensible date and the evidence for each
- Built for s.214 wrongful trading and s.212 misfeasance review

Review flags from the DLA demo matter, invented data

Form E · schedules of loss

Form E and schedules of loss

- Financial disclosure schedules for family matters
- Schedules of loss built from the documents provided
- Every line cross-referenced to its source document and row

How it works

No software to install from a directory. We set the skills up with you.

01 A short call We talk through your matters and who on your team will use it.	02 We set up the skills We share the LedgerSense skills and set them up in your firm's own Claude workspace.	03 Run a matter Your team adds the statement and records and asks for the schedule in plain English.	04 You review and sign off Every output is a draft. The practitioner reviews it and signs off before it's used.
